DESERTED IN DEATH.

Mind-Reader Bishop's Body in the Undertaker's Hands.

Neither His Bride Nor Friends to Arrange for the Funeral.

His End Came Just in the Way He Expected and Hoped For.

Without friend or relative at hand, the body of W. Irving Bishop, the famous mind-reader, reposed in a sombre-looking coffin in one corner of William H. Hawks' undertaking establishment, at No. 8 Sixth avenue, when an EVENING WORLD reporter called there this morning.

"Has Bishop's wife or any of his relatives been here yet?" the reporter asked Mr. Hawks.

"No," the latter replied. "The people have telegraphed for them to come on, but they have not put in an appearance or sent any word," he said.

"Have any of his friends been here?"

"No," he replied. "He brought him here yesterday."

The reporter could not repress a sigh of pity and regret for the neglect of a man who went through life easily, ever in the midst of good company.

Bishop was a strange creature. THE EVENING WORLD of yesterday described his life and end accurately, but there is enough yet to be told about him to fill a book with interesting reading.

Bishop often remarked: "I want to die in a minute when my time comes. No lingering death for me I hope," and many of his most intimate friends believe that he was often pained by his affliction with cancer, which a famous physician once told him that the disease would probably cause his death some time within a few days.

He was entertaining a jolly Bohemian crowd in the Lamb's Club, when the physician's prophecy became fulfilled.

Bishop had performed some of the less difficult feats in mind-reading, when he suddenly declared: "They say I don't read minds. I read it is muscle-reading by which I perform my feats. I will show you something never done before."

Then he asked Secretary Green, of the Club, to go downstairs to where the club's books are kept and select a word in any one of them.

Mr. Green and Dr. J. A. Irwin did as directed and selected the name of Margaret Townsend, in the minute book, which he appeared in connection with some records relating to the Lester Wallack benefit.

They returned upstairs, where Bishop, blindfolded and highly excited, awaited them.

He took Mr. Green's hand and led the party downstairs at a run almost.

He found the book easily, picking it out of a number of others.

He turned the pages over rapidly until he came to the one on which the name was written.

He ran his finger down it, and then he said: "Suddenly he paused and asked for a piece of paper. It was handed to him, and without a word he wrote on it the name of Margaret Townsend, which was the name of the woman whose name he had selected from the book."

Then he asked Secretary Green, of the Club, to go downstairs to where the club's books are kept and select a word in any one of them.

minute's hesitation he dashed off the word Townsend in lead pencil, writing it backward. "Is that it?" he eagerly asked.

"Yes," was answered.

Then, Bishop told the Bishop the party up stairs, where the bandage was taken off his eyes.

"The most successful feat of my life," he murmured, and staggered and fell.

He was carried to a room and put to bed, but insisted on getting up and performing the trick the same night.

Another attack immediately followed and he was put to bed again never to leave it alive. Arrangements for his funeral have not yet been completed.

Officials in a Muddle.

JERSEY'S OLD AND NEW BOARDS ISSUING CONTRARY ORDERS.

The refusal of Chief Justice Beasley, of Jersey City, to decide which set of officials shall be in power until the legality of the new charter is passed upon by the Supreme Court, has made affairs worse than ever.

The new officials are determined to obtain control of the offices. The old officials are equally determined to remain in possession.

Members of the new Board gathered at the City Hall and the old Board gathered at the Board of Aldermen's office. Both sides are determined to obtain control of the offices.

Police were kept in readiness to prevent trouble. Two policemen were stationed in the City Hall last night.

Chief of Police Murphy recognized the new Board and was suspended by the old Board, and Clerk Robinson recognized the old Board and was suspended by the new Board.

The old Board tried to install Capt. Newton and Archy McKaig to Chief Murphy's position, but both refused to accept.

The old Board summoned all the captains by telephone. Chief Murphy countermanded the order.

The captains were answered by the old Board and reinstated by the new.

BRIDGE HOSTELRIES TO GO.

PLANS BY THE TRUSTEES WHICH DOOM HILLEN'S AND KOSMAK'S.

The Coroners Will Also Be Compelled to Change Their Quarters—Only a Very Brief Respite Allowed by Chief Engineer Martin's Report—Four Trains at a Time Can Occupy the Station Under the New Plans.

Will those pleasant resting places for the Park Row traveler, Kosmak's and Hillen's, have to go? It would seem so, and further that the Coroners must soon change their quarters. The Bridge Trustees have decided to buy thirty-one feet of Park Row on each side of the Bridge approach. The estimated cost of the land is $250,000.

The bridge station is to be moved back eighty feet. The two platforms will be widened from eight to twenty feet. Trains will be run on each side of a platform, so that four trains may stand in the station at once. These facilities are expected to double the carrying capacity of the bridge, as they will enable the trains to load and unload faster.

The station will be widened to 20 feet. The roadways will be moved 20 feet north and south respectively of their present position, and will be widened so that access to them will be easier.

The changes were suggested by Comptroller Myers, H. R. Thurber and Geo. W. Anderson. They were unanimously adopted by the Trustees. The total cost will be about $400,000.

The widening of the terminal will begin opposite Gold Street.

Chief Engineer Martin estimates that the improvement can be completed in six months' time if there be no delay in the acquisition of the necessary property.

The enlargement of the Brooklyn terminus and increase in the facilities for handling trains and passengers at that end of the bridge, which has already been provided for by action of the trustees, will not be undertaken until after the completion of the improvement on the New York end.

Feastivities for the Orphans.

The anniversary exercises of the New York Orphan Asylum, at Riverside Drive and West Seventy-third street, take place this afternoon.

The exercises include an address by the Rev. Leighton Williams, after which the youngsters give an entertainment all of themselves, consisting of songs and recitations. Robert Mason, Sallie Seedorf, Charlie Marks, Rosie Brandt, William Jordan, J. Ellinger, Katie Herzer, Henry Starks, George Vail, George Schneider and a lot of other little boys and girls take part, under the supervision of Sup't. C. J. Demarest.

Lillian Ferguson Marries a Frank.

John W. Coffey, the skeleton dancer, who has been receiving matrimonial proposals for four weeks at Worth's Museum, has got a wife sure enough. Lillian Ferguson, not airy, fairy, but substantial, 150-pounder, who has been wooing Lillian, wooed and won the Frank. They are spending the honeymoon at the Hotel St. George, Brooklyn.

Found a Dead Woman.

Policeman Hugh O'Neill, of the Twenty-ninth Precinct, found the dead body of a woman on the corner of One Hundred and Sixteenth street and Fourth avenue at 3.30 o'clock this morning. She was about thirty years old, wore a calico dress, black and white striped petticoat, a linen nightgown with the letters "M. O." on the front, white stockings and low-cut shoes.

Two Babies in a Sewer.

Frederick Tachener, of 24 Scholles street, Brooklyn, this morning found the bodies of two infants at the mouth of the sewer, on Johnson avenue. They were sent to the Morgue.

The First Weakish Caught.

The first weakish of the season was caught yesterday at Gifford's, Great Kills, N. Y., by G. W. Graham, a member of the Bqueleque Club.
